EVALUATING INFORMATION FOUND ON THE INTERNET

Things to Consider in Evaluating Information:

- Reliability
- Accuracy
- Value
- Authority
- Timeliness

Reliability of Information

Information is said to be reliable if it can be verified and evaluated. Others refer to the trustworthiness of the source in evaluating the reliability of information.

reliability

/re·li·abil·i·ty/ noun

Being able to be trusted to do what is expected or has been promised.

Accuracy of Information

Accuracy Vs Precision

Accuracy refers to the closeness of the report to the actual data. Measurement of accuracy varies, depending on the type of information being evaluated.

Value of Information

Information is said to be of value if it aids the user in making or improving decisions.

Authority of the Source

- Who authored or published the information?
- Is the source credible?

Timeliness

Reliability, accuracy, and value of information may vary based on the time it was produced or acquired. It may become irrelevant and inaccurate with the passing of time (thus making it less valuable)

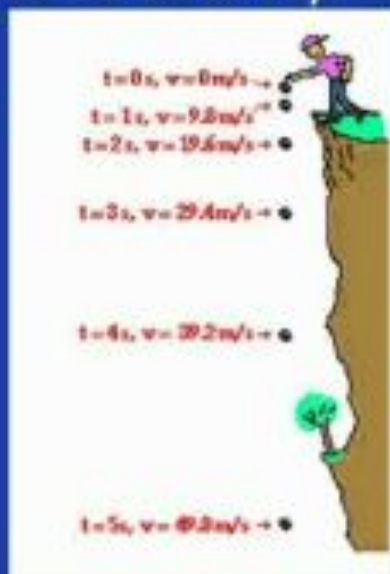

Timeliness

Acceleration Due to Gravity

- Acceleration due to gravity given its own special letter: g

- $g = 9.8 \text{ m/s/s}$, downward

- ($\sim 10 \text{ m/s/s}$, downward)

Other information may be timeless, proven to be the same in reliability, accuracy, and value throughout history.

Skills in determining the Reliability of Information

- a. Check the Author
- b. Check the Date of Publication or of update
- c. Check for Citations
- d. Check the Domain or owner of the site/page.
 - .com - Commercial entities (worldwide)
 - .edu - Educational institutions
 - .mil - Military entities
 - .gov - Governmental entities
 - .org - Miscellaneous organizations not fitting in other categories (generally noncommercial)

Skills in Determining Accurate Information

- Look for facts.
- Cross-reference with other source for consistency.
- Determine the reason for writing and publishing the information.

PERFORMANCE TASK: Interview Time!

You are to interview at least 3 elders. You will ask about cultural beliefs or practices in the community valued by the elder/s.

You need to identify and gather information at least three cultural beliefs or practices. Then, find out if these cultural beliefs or practices are still known and being valued by your generation.

INTERVIEW QUESTIONS:

1. Can you share with me a cultural belief or practice that has been valued by our community for generations?
2. Do you think this belief or practice is still relevant and valued by younger generations today?

After the interview, answer this question:

As a youth, how can you ensure the preservation and transmission of these cultural beliefs and practices to future generations?

Write your output in a short bond paper.
